Hi Jake,

Following our recent meeting, we have revisited both the pricing and packaging as discussed, and we would like to share an updated proposal reflecting these adjustments.

For the 10oz packaging format, we are now able to offer a unit price of USD 5,05, which not only reflects the agreed adjustments but also allows for a lower final cost to the consumer.

Additionally, one of the points we covered was the labeling requirements for the U.S. market. Could you please share the mandatory information that must be included on the product packaging?

Furthermore, would you be able to share the presentation material with us?

Thank you in advance, and I look forward to your feedback.

Best regards,

Dear Thomas,

Following our discussions, we were able to secure an 11% reduction in price, bringing the new price to USD 6.05. This represents a significant effort on our side, and we are making a strong commitment by tightening our margins in order to support the development of this partnership and ensure a competitive position in the market.

Regarding the points discussed, we are happy to confirm that we are fully supportive of providing one pallet of products at no cost for promotional activities, as well as participating in the KeHE Holiday Show. We see these initiatives as important opportunities to help build awareness and drive trial for the brand.

With respect to the brands being considered in the competitive set, we would appreciate a bit more clarity on the pricing benchmark being used. When we analyze the retail pricing of lly, for example, our calculations suggest that our product would still land at a more competitive final shelf price on a proportional basis. Understanding the reference set being used will help ensure we are aligned in positioning the brand correctly on shelf.

If possible, we would also appreciate the opportunity to connect later this week to discuss the market dynamics and the price positioning in more detail.

We truly believe there is a great opportunity to grow the category together and remain fully committed to supporting the launch and long-term success of the brand.

Best Regards,

AMANDA SOUSA

Dear Amanda,

Thank you again for taking the time to meet with us and discuss the potential launch of Orfeu in the U.S. market.

As discussed during our call, please find attached our Import Cost Analysis, which outlines the cost structure required to successfully import and distribute the brand through the KeHE network.

Based on this analysis and your current price, the final retail price at the supermarket would be over $21.00, which in our opinion would be too high for the market. We would recommend an MSRP of approximately $18.00 and launching through the New @ KeHE program. The key elements we discussed to move forward are the following:

- A 17% discount from the current export price, allowing the product to fit within the retail margin structure.
- One pallet of product provided FOB at no cost, to be used exclusively for promotional activities tied to the New @ KeHE program, where the product is often given away practically for free. OA Foods would manage all associated logistics and import costs.
- Participation from Orfeu at the KeHE Holiday Show. This is an excellent opportunity where many buyers walk the show floor and would have the chance to sample the coffee.

Please let us know your thoughts, and we would be happy to discuss the next steps.

Kindest regards
